The Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act of 1994 (FASA), enacted on October 13, 1994, as Public Law 103-355, contained more than 200 sections changing the laws that govern how agencies acquire almost $$ 200$ billion of goods and services annually. The act established deadlines for publishing proposed and final implementing regulations, prescribed a minimum 60 -day period for public review and comment on proposed regulations, and required regulation drafters to make every effort to ensure that the regulations are concise and understandable.

This report responds to section 10003(a) of the act, which required us to evaluate and report on compliance with these requirements. Our objectives were to (1) determine whether all regulations necessary to implement the act were published in accordance with the act's requirements and (2) describe the efforts made to make the regulations concise and understandable.

Background

FASA directed that proposed regulations be published not later than 210 days after enactment, or by May 11, 1995, and be available for public review and comment for not less than 60 days. FASA also required final regulations to be published not later than 330 days after enactment, or by September 8, 1995. It also said that every effort practicable should be made to ensure that the regulations are concise and easily understandable by potential offerors and government officials.

Implementing FASA has been a complex process, involving revisions to numerous regulations, principally the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR), which applies to all executive agencies. ${ }^{1}$ Revisions also were needed in the Defense Federal Acquisition Regulation Supplement, other agencies' FAR supplements, and miscellaneous other regulations, such as our Bid Protest Regulations. In addition, FASA amendments resulted in the issuance of nonregulatory guidance, such as Department of Defense directives and instructions.

[^0]FASA specified that some provisions were to apply to acquisitions upon enactment, others were to apply on the date specified in final regulations, but all provisions were to apply no later than October 1, 1995.

The Federal Acquisition Regulatory Council established a special project to draft the necessary revisions to the FAR. In place of the traditional defense and civilian regulatory councils and their committees, ${ }^{2}$ the special project had a project manager from the Department of Defense, a deputy from the General Services Administration, and 11 interagency drafting teams. More than 100 people staffed the special project, many with prior experience drafting procurement regulations. The Federal Acquisition Regulatory Council established an ambitious goal of publishing the final revisions to the far by March 23, 1995.

Results in Brief

With two exceptions, all proposed revisions to the FAR necessary to implement fASA were published in the Federal Register by the May 11, 1995, fasA deadline. The two exceptions were the proposed regulation on fraud remedies, which was published on May 12, 1995, and an implementing regulation for the FASA provision requiring alternatives to payment bonds, which had not been published as of March 15, 1996, when we completed our review.

Of the 29 FAR regulations needed to implement FASA, only 13 were published in final form by the FASA deadline, September 8, 1995. Two more regulations had been issued in interim form. ${ }^{3}$ An additional 11 final FAR regulations, however, were published by October 1, 1995. Thus, 26 of the 29 FAR revisions needed to implement fasA were in place on the latest date that all changes directed by FASA were to apply to government acquisitions. ${ }^{4}$ According to officials involved in managing the regulation drafting project, key factors that slowed the process included (1) translating FASA language into regulations useful to contracting officers and (2) addressing public comments, especially on the more complex,

[^1]innovative, or controversial regulations. In general, there was less compliance with FASA deadlines with respect to the non-FAR regulations.

Appendix I lists the final regulations that were published by the fasA deadline, those that were published by October 1, and the status of those regulations that were not published in final form by either of these dates. Appendix II summarizes how each of the 204 FASA sections has been implemented, through regulation or otherwise.

The FAR drafting teams devoted considerable effort toward making FASA regulations concise and understandable. Many team members had previous experience both in writing regulations and in using them, as well as expertise in the different subject areas. Team staffing included legal advisers and executive branch officials familiar with FASA's progress from legislative proposal to enactment. Some team leaders told us that they were able to draw upon regulatory proposals already underway before FASA was enacted. They also told us that some teams consulted subject matter experts. Among the resources available to the teams was the far Drafting Conventions Guide, issued in October 1994, which included a chapter on clear writing.

When proposed regulations were circulated to federal agencies or published in the Federal Register, the drafting teams received hundreds of comments. In addition, the Federal Acquisition Regulatory Council, project managers, and drafting teams held public meetings to hear presentations from anyone who wanted to present oral comments on seven proposed regulations. Presenters included agency and industry personnel. Both project managers and drafting teams said that the comments they received helped them to create a better final product. These comments are available at the far Secretariat, the office that supports publication of regulations.

Other efforts were made to make the regulations understandable to those who have to use them. The Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Federal Acquisition Institute, and the FASA implementation project worked together to develop a number of different training resources and explanatory materials that would help buying activities understand FASA changes. The training was designed to explain the impact of the new regulations to the acquisition workforce in detail. Training resources included the following:

- a five-part videotape series, entitled "FASA: Making It Work," which portrayed operational use of new policies and procedures to conduct different types of procurements;
- viewer reference materials, including flowcharts and briefing charts, that synopsized and highlighted key points;
- live, televised call-in question and answer sessions with drafting team leaders and other procurement experts, which were subsequently made available on videotapes and in written form;
- a side-by-side comparison of changes to the FAR with previous text of the FAR; and
- a process-oriented Guide to FAR Changes that highlighted changes in conducting procurements in such areas as publicizing proposed procurements, establishing reasonableness of prices, and responding to bid protests.

Officials responsible for sponsoring FASA training estimated that approximately 15,000 people viewed the five-part series when it was broadcast, and 1,600 people requested materials that were available following the broadcasts.

Agency Comments

We asked the Departments of Defense, Labor, and Transportation, as well as the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, the General Services Administration, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to review and comment on a draft of this report. The Department of Defense orally responded that it generally agreed with the report but offered some editorial and technical suggestions that have been incorporated in the final report. The General Services Administration orally responded with some concerns and editorial and technical suggestions; its concerns and suggestions were discussed and incorporated in the final report. The Departments of Labor and Transportation, the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration indicated their agreement with the report's contents.

Appendix III describes our scope and methodology.
We are sending copies of this report to the Director, Office of Management and Budget; the Secretaries of Defense, Labor, and Transportation; the Administrator for Federal Procurement Policy; the Administrator of General Services; the Administrator of National Aeronautics and Space; and other interested congressional committees. We also will make copies available to others upon request.

Please contact me or my Associate Director, David E. Cooper, at (202) 512-4841 if you or your staff have any questions concerning this report. Major contributors to this report were Philip A. Goulet, Anne W. Howe, Maureen A. Murphy, and William T. Woods.

Regulatory Implementation of the Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act of 1994

Abstract

This appendix lists, by status, the regulations necessary to implement the Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act of 1994 (FASA). The list of regulations provides titles, citations to the Federal Register, and effective dates, if regulations have been published. Regulations are listed in four categories. The first category contains final regulations that were published by FASA's deadline for final regulations of September 8, 1995. The second category contains additional final regulations that were published after September 8, 1995, but by October 1, 1995. ## Other Implementation

Proposed Regulations Published by October 1, 1995

1. FAR, Travel Costs, 59 Fed. Reg. 64542 (Dec. 14, 1994). FASA section 2191 repealed the statutory basis for the existing regulation. The Federal Acquisition Regulatory Council withdrew the proposed rule in its notice of public meeting
(60 Fed. Reg. 27471, May 24, 1995).
2. FAR, Small Business, 60 Fed. Reg. 2302 (Jan. 6, 1995). Portions covering small disadvantaged businesses (to implement fasa section 7102) were withheld from the final regulation pending executive branch review of affirmative action following the Adarand Supreme Court decision. ${ }^{5}$ Those portions relating to small disadvantaged business set-asides and the evaluation preference for small disadvantaged businesses were established as a separate far Case, 94-781. Other portions relating to the

[^4]small business reservation (FASA section 4004) were transferred to the Simplified Acquisition Procedures/FAcnet interim regulation. Other coverage in the proposed rule was incorporated into the final regulation at 60 Fed. Reg. 48258 (Sept. 18, 1995).
3. FAR, Special Contracting Methods, 60 Fed. Reg. 14340 (Mar. 16, 1995). Sections covering new procedures for multiyear contracting were not published in final form pending further Office of Management and Budget review and were established as FAR Case 94-712 for separate processing. Most of the coverage in the proposed rule was incorporated into the final regulation at 60 Fed. Reg. 49720 (Sept. 26, 1995).
4. DFARS, Contract Award (Proposed), 60 Fed. Reg. 40146 (Aug. 7, 1995). Regulations implementing FASA sections 1505 and 2402 were made final in 61 Fed. Reg. 7739 (Feb. 29, 1996).

Proposed Regulations
Published After
October 1, 1995

1. Dfars, Cost Principles, 60 Fed. Reg. 53320
(Oct. 13, 1995).
2. DFARS, Truth in Negotiations Act and Related Changes, 60 Fed. Reg. 54326 (Oct. 23, 1995). This publication includes the proposed deletion of DFARS language that implemented 10 U.S.C. 2406 , the primary statute covering work measurement systems, which was repealed by FASA section 2201(b).
3. DFARS, Multiyear Contracting and Other Miscellaneous Provisions, 60 Fed. Reg. 56972 (Nov. 13, 1995).
4. dfars, Miscellaneous Amendments, 60 Fed. Reg. 61586 (Nov. 30, 1995). This publication includes interim implementation of FASA defense-unique commercial contracting provisions, effective November 30, 1995.
5. FASA section 1022, Revision and Reorganization of Multiyear Contracting Authority, to be implemented in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration far Supplement and Department of Transportation Acquisition Regulation pertaining to the United States Coast Guard. Agency officials told us they were waiting for FAR multiyear contracting coverage before issuing regulations.
6. FASA section 1439, Oversight of Acquisition of Automatic Data Processing Equipment by Federal Agencies. This section was to be implemented in the General Services Administration's Federal Information Resources Management Regulation. However, the oversight authority of the General Services Administration was repealed by section 5101 of the Information Technology Management Reform Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-106, sections 5001-5703).
7. FASA section 4104(b), Miller Act. FASA section 4104(b)(2)(A) requires alternatives to payment bonds as payment protections for suppliers of labor and materials. Publication of an interim rule under FAR Case 95-301 was pending in the spring of 1996, according to the Deputy Project Manager for the Implementation of FASA. ${ }^{6}$
8. FASA section 7105, Extension of Defense Contract Goal to Coast Guard and National Aeronautics and Space Administration, to be implemented in DFARS, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration FAR Supplement, and the Department of Transportation Acquisition Regulation pertaining to the United States Coast Guard (awaiting executive branch review of federal affirmative action programs following the Adarand Supreme Court decision). ${ }^{7}$
9. FASA sections 7301-7306, Community Improvement Volunteer Act of 1994, to be implemented in Department of Labor regulations.
10. FASA section 8301, Inapplicability of Certain Provisions of Law. Section 8301(d) exempts firm fixed-price contracts or subcontracts (without cost incentives) for commercial items from cost accounting standards promulgated by the Cost Accounting Standards Board. The Cost Accounting Standards Board did not amend regulations at 48 C.F.R. 9903.201-1 to reflect this change. However, in a memorandum dated December 18, 1995, the Chairman of the Cost Accounting Standards Board notified senior procurement executives that the Board delegated to federal procuring agencies the authority to waive the application of cost accounting standards to individual firm fixed-price contracts for the acquisition of commercial items, when cost or pricing data is not obtained.

Analysis of Implementation of FASA Sections

This appendix provides a section-by-section guide to FASA implementation.
The first two columns of table II. 1 set out all FASA sections and titles, followed by brief synopses in the third column. The remaining five columns under the "Implementation" heading provide either citations for regulatory implementation or other explanatory information if the FASA section did not require regulatory implementation. We used the following five implementation categories:

- Final regulation published by September 8, 1995. Regulatory implementation met FASA's deadline for publication in final form.
- Final regulation published by October 1, 1995. Although not published by September 8, 1995, the regulation was published in final form by the latest date all FASA provisions of law became applicable.
- Proposed regulation published by October 1, 1995. This category includes references to regulations published only in proposed form by October 1, 1995.
- Other. This category consists of regulatory implementation or other status as follows:
- interim regulations, which must be followed, but remain subject to change when made final and
- FASA sections for which no regulatory implementation has been published in any form.
- No regulatory implementation required. This category includes information relating to FASA sections that did not require revising regulations in the Code of Federal Regulations. The reasons for this include the following:
- FASA changes were technical in nature (e.g., editorial revisions or changes made to achieve conformity with other laws);
- existing regulations were sufficient to cover FASA's content and did not need revision; or
- FASA was implemented through other types of actions, not by revising regulations.

The 204 sections of FASA were grouped into the following 10 titles:

- Title I—Contract Formation
- Title II-Contract Administration
- Title III—Service Specific and Major Systems Statutes
- Title IV—Simplified Acquisition Threshold
- Title V—Acquisition Management
- Title VI—Other Procurement-Related Matters
- Title VII-Small Business and Socioeconomic Laws
- Title VIII—Commercial Items
- Title IX—Federal Acquisition Computer Network
- Title X-Effective Dates and Implementation

Analysis of Implementation of FASA Sections
aThis FASA section was assigned to a regulation drafting team by the FAR Council's special project to implement FASA for implementation in the FAR. The drafting team subsequently determined that no regulatory implementation action was required.
${ }^{\mathrm{b}}$ No regulatory implementation action by any federal agency was required.
cThis FASA section was assigned to a regulation drafting team by the FAR Council's special project to implement FASA for implementation in the Defense Federal Acquisition Regulation Supplement. The team subsequently determined that no regulatory implementation action was required.
${ }^{\text {d}}$ The Supreme Court's decision in Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Pena, 115 S. Ct. 2097 (1995), set forth a new standard for evaluating the constitutionality of race-based affirmative action programs, and the President directed on July 19, 1995, that executive agencies review affirmative action programs under that standard.

Scope and Methodology

To determine whether all necessary regulations were issued, we first undertook a detailed reading of all FASA statutory provisions and legislative history. We obtained FASA implementation plans from the Federal Acquisition Regulatory Council and the Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition and Technology) that were established specifically for promulgating FAR revisions and for defense-unique implementation. We discussed these plans with project managers and officials of the regulatory councils. We interviewed team leaders and team legal advisers responsible for FAR revisions to discuss the steps they took to determine regulatory coverage, and we reviewed the FAR drafting teams' methodology for identifying necessary revisions.

We documented that regulations were issued by extracting information from the Federal Register, and we analyzed in detail how FAR revisions were structured to implement each FASA section. In some instances, we conducted computerized key word searches of the Code of Federal Regulations to (1) determine whether coverage relating to a particular FASA section already existed and should be revised or (2) review regulatory drafting teams' determinations that FASA sections assigned to them did not require regulatory implementation. We followed up with the drafting teams to confirm our results. We followed similar steps for non-FAR regulations. In addition, we documented actions taken to implement FASA other than issuing regulations.

In addition to the above steps, we performed an in-depth legal review of seven of the FAR revisions that had public meetings. We reviewed the regulations and available drafting team reports to determine whether the regulations were consistent with the provisions and purposes of FASA and its legislative history and to identify the major issues that arose in the promulgation of the regulation.

To determine compliance with FASA's publishing deadlines and requirements for 60 -day comment periods, we reviewed the Federal Register and documented publication dates for proposed, interim, and final regulations and the period allowed for submitting public comments.

We evaluated the executive branch efforts to ensure that the regulations are concise and easily understandable by potential offerors as well as by government officials.

We conducted our work between November 1994 and March 1996 in accordance with generally accepted government auditing standards. Since the latest date that all of FASA's provisions were applicable to government acquisitions was October 1, 1995, we used that date for reporting on the status of implementing regulations. However, we included updates through March 1996. Although our report is due not later than 180 days after final revisions to the far have been issued, we are reporting based on the majority having been issued. Several final revisions to the far had not been published as of March 1996.

[^0]:    ${ }^{1}$ The FAR is the primary regulation for use by all executive agencies in their acquisition of supplies and services with appropriated funds. Authority for revising the FAR is shared by the three executive agencies represented on the Federal Acquisition Regulatory Council by the Secretary of Defense, the Administrator of General Services, and the Administrator of National Aeronautics and Space or their designees. The Office of Federal Procurement Policy within the Office of Management and Budget is responsible for providing overall leadership and for ensuring action in cases where the three agencies cannot agree or fail to issue FAR revisions in a timely manner.

[^1]:    ${ }^{2}$ Defense and civilian regulatory councils, with 29 committees covering specialized subjects, traditionally have been responsible for maintaining the FAR. The two-council approach was created so that the Defense Acquisition Regulatory Council retained control over the creation of defense-unique regulations and a newly created Civilian Agency Acquisition Council would share responsibility for regulations that apply governmentwide. The two councils and committees have members from Department of Defense components, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and civilian agencies.
    ${ }^{3}$ Interim regulations must be followed, but are subject to change before being made final.
    ${ }^{4}$ The three regulations that were not in place by October 1, 1995, related to alternatives to payment bonds, multiyear contracting, and small disadvantaged businesses.

[^2]:    ${ }^{1}$ This was published simultaneously with revision of the nonprocurement debarment and suspension Common Rule, which requires that suspensions, debarments, and other exclusions from federal programs apply governmentwide to both procurement and nonprocurement activities. (The nonprocurement Common Rule was issued as final regulations by participating executive branch agencies, with the exception of the Department of Transportation, which issued interim final regulations with an opportunity to comment [60 Fed. Reg. 33037, June 26, 1995].)

[^3]:    ${ }^{2} 41$ U.S.C. 418 b requires that a procurement regulation be published if it has (1) a significant effect beyond the internal operating procedures of the issuing agency or (2) a significant cost or administrative impact on contractors or offerors. Even though FASA required publication of proposed implementing regulations, this regulation did not have the attributes stated in 41 U.S.C. 418 b that require publication.
    ${ }^{3}$ See footnote 2.

[^4]:    ${ }^{4}$ This regulation was published simultaneously with Electronic Contracting, which is an interim regulation to amend the FAR to address use of electronic commerce/electronic data interchange in federal government contracting ( 60 Fed. Reg. 34735 [July 3, 1995]). The Electronic Contracting interim regulation and the Simplified Acquisition Procedures/FACNET (Federal Acquisition Computer Network) interim regulation are interdependent and meant to be considered jointly.
    ${ }^{5}$ The Supreme Court's decision in Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Pena, 115 S. Ct. 2097 (1995), set forth a new standard for evaluating the constitutionality of race-based affirmative action programs, and the President directed on July 19, 1995, that executive agencies review affirmative action programs under that standard.

[^5]:    ${ }^{6}$ Pending required implementation of FASA section 4104 (b)(2)(A) in the FAR, an interim DFARS rule providing alternatives to payment bonds for Department of Defense agencies was published and effective on August 31, 1995 (60 Fed. Reg. 45376). Revisions, still interim, were published later (61 Fed. Reg. 3600 and 61 Fed. Reg. 7739).
