The FCC's final rule establishes a band plan and adopts service rules to begin the process of assigning licenses for public safety stations to operate in the newly reallocated spectrum of 746-776 and 794-806 MHz. The rule also designates a portion of the 700 MHz spectrum to permit different governmental agencies to communicate with each other (interoperability) and adopts technical specifications necessary to enhance spectrum efficiency, promote nationwide interoperability, and minimize harmful interference.
Enclosed is our assessment of the FCC's compliance with the procedural steps required by section 801(a)(1)(B)(i) through (iv) of title 5 with respect to the rule. Our review indicates that the FCC complied with the applicable requirements.

(WT Docket No. 96-86; FCC 98-191)

(i) Cost-benefit analysis

The FCC's submission to us stated that it was not required to prepare and did not prepare a cost-benefit analysis of the rule.

(ii) Agency actions relevant to the Regulatory Flexibility Act, 5 U.S.C. §§ 603-605, 607, and 609

The initial regulatory flexibility analysis (IRFA) was incorporated in the notice of on the proposed rulemaking, including comments on the initial regulatory flexibility analysis.

The IRFA provides the information required by paragraphs 603(b)(1), (b)(2), (b)(3), and (b)(4). It describes the reasons for the proposed agency action; its objectives; the legal basis; and the reporting, recordkeeping, and other compliance requirements of the proposed rule. In addition, in accordance with 603(b)(5), the FCC notes that there are no federal rules that may duplicate, overlap, or conflict with the proposed rule.

The rule incorporates the Final Regulatory Flexibility Analysis (RFA) consistent with the requirements of 5 U.S.C. § 604. The analysis notes that the small entities affected include approximately 81,600 small governmental entities, six radio and television equipment manufacturers, as well as television stations, TV translator stations, and low-power TV stations. The FCC satisfies the requirements of section 604(a). It describes the need for and objective of the final rule. It notes that no significant issues were raised by public comments in response to the IRFA.
The Commission notes the steps it has taken to minimize the economic impact on small entities.
