Subject: Department of Homeland Security, Bureau of Customs and Border Protection: Advance Electronic Transmission of Passenger and Crew Member Manifests for Commercial Aircraft and Vessels

The final rule amends CBP’s regulations regarding electronic manifest transmission requirements for travelers aboard international commercial flights and voyages arriving in and departing from the United States. The final rule amends these regulations so that all passengers on commercial aircraft and all passengers and crew on commercial vessels will be vetted against a terrorist watch list prior to the departure of the aircraft or vessel.

Enclosed is our assessment of the CBP’s compliance with the procedural steps required by section 801(a)(1)(B)(i) through (iv) of title 5 with respect to the rule. Our review indicates that CBP complied with the applicable requirements.

(i) Cost-benefit analysis

CBP performed a cost-benefit analysis and estimates that the present value costs of the final rule will range from $827 million to $1.2 billion over 10 years. The estimated benefits of the final rule include a present value monetary benefit of $105 million over 10 years, in addition to the qualitative benefit of enhancing security.

(ii) Agency actions relevant to the Regulatory Flexibility Act, 5 U.S.C. §§ 603-605, 607, and 609

CBP performed a regulatory assessment under the Regulatory Flexibility Act and has determined that the final rule will not have a significant impact on a substantial number of small entities.

(iii) Agency actions relevant to sections 202-205 of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995, 2 U.S.C. §§ 1532-1535

CBP determined that the final rule did not contain an intergovernmental mandate. The final rule does contain a federal private sector mandate as it would result in the expenditure of more than $100 million by the private sector. CBP incorporated the cost benefit analysis prepared under Executive Order 12,866 to satisfy the requirements of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995.

(iv) Other relevant information or requirements under acts and executive orders

The collection of information under the regulations has been approved by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), OMB No. 1651-0088. Executive Order No. 12,866

The final rule was considered to be an economically significant regulatory action under the executive order and was reviewed by the Office of Management and Budget.

Executive Order No. 13,132 (Federalism)
