SUBJECT: PREPACKAGED NEWS STORIES

Since 1951, Congress has enacted an annual, governmentwide prohibition on the use of appropriated funds for purposes of “publicity or propaganda.” During the past year, we found that several prepackaged news stories produced and distributed by certain government agencies violated this prohibition. In the course of our work, we learned that prepackaged news stories have become common tools of the public relations industry, and that some federal agencies are adopting them as well. The purpose of this letter is to remind agencies of the constraints imposed by the publicity or propaganda prohibition on the use of prepackaged news stories and to advise vigilance to assure that agencies’ activities comply with the prohibition. Importantly, prepackaged news stories can be utilized without violating the law, so long as there is clear disclosure to the television viewing audience that this material was prepared by or in cooperation with the government department or agency.

Prepackaged news stories are complete, audio-video presentations that may be included in video news releases, or VNRs. They are intended to be indistinguishable from news segments broadcast to the public by independent television news organizations. To help accomplish this goal, these stories include actors or others hired to portray “reporters” and may be accompanied by suggested scripts that television news anchors can use to introduce the story during the broadcast. These practices allow prepackaged news stories to be broadcast, without alteration, as television news.

2 Among other things, typical VNRs may also contain “B-roll” video clips, advertisements, and public service announcements. As a general matter, B-roll video clips of government officials discussing programs do not violate the prohibition. Advertisements and public service announcements that include the appropriate disclosures are also not objectionable. E.g., B-343495, Jan. 4, 2004, n.8; B-302710, May, 19, 2004, n.27; B-302504, Mar. 10, 2004.
The current publicity or propaganda prohibition states: "No part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes within the United States not heretofore authorized by the Congress." Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2005, Pub. L. No. 108-447, div. G, title II, § 624, 118 Stat. 2809, 3278 (Dec. 8, 2004). (The language of the prohibition has remained virtually unchanged since 1951.) We have previously taken exception to an agency's use of appropriated funds to produce printed materials that concealed the agency's role in sponsoring the materials. 66 Comp. Gen. 707 (1987) (State Department retained contractors to prepare and have published newspaper articles and op-ed pieces "as the ostensible position of persons not associated with the government"); B-223098, B-223098.2, Oct. 10, 1986 (Small Business Administration prepared and distributed to newspapers “suggested editorials . . . for publication as the ostensible editorial position of the recipient newspapers”).

In two cases this past year, the agencies commissioned and distributed prepackaged news stories and introductory scripts about their activities that were designed to be indistinguishable from news stories produced by private news broadcasters. B-303495, Jan. 4, 2005; B-302710, May 19, 2004. In neither case did the agency include any statement or other indication in its news stories that disclosed to the television viewing audience, the target of the purported news stories, that the agency wrote and produced those news stories. In other words, television-viewing audiences did not know that stories they watched on television news programs about the government were, in fact, prepared by the government. We concluded that those prepackaged news stories violated the publicity or propaganda prohibition.3

While agencies generally have the right to disseminate information about their policies and activities, agencies may not use appropriated funds to produce or distribute prepackaged news stories intended to be viewed by television audiences that conceal or do not clearly identify for the television viewing audience that the agency was the source of those materials. It is not enough that the contents of an agency's communication may be unobjectionable. Neither is it enough for an agency to identify itself to the broadcasting organization as the source of the prepackaged news story.

As we stated in B-302710, “In a modest but meaningful way, the publicity or propaganda restriction helps to mark the boundary between an agency making information available to the public and agencies creating news reports unbeknownst to the receiving audience.” See also B-303495, Jan. 4, 2005, n.29. This is not the only marker Congress has enacted to delineate the boundaries between the government and the free American press. See, e.g., 22 U.S.C. §§ 1461, 1461-1a (restricting the domestic dissemination of news reports originally created by the government for broadcast abroad). Statutory limits on the domestic dissemination of U.S. government-produced news reports reflect concern that allowing the government to produce domestic news broadcasts would infringe upon the freedom of the press and constitute (or at least give the appearance of) an attempt to control public opinion. B-118654-O.M., Apr. 17, 1979.

Agency officials should scrutinize any proposed prepackaged news stories to ensure appropriate disclosures. Should you or your staff have questions concerning the application of these principles in particular cases, our Office of General Counsel is available to assist on an informal consultative basis or, as necessary, on a formal decision basis. Please contact Susan A. Poling, Managing Associate General Counsel, at 202-512-2667, or Thomas H. Armstrong, Assistant General Counsel, at 202-512-8257.

SUBJECT: TRANSMISSION OF ANTIDEFICIENCY ACT REPORTS TO THE COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES

The Antideficiency Act prohibits, among other things, making or authorizing expenditures or obligations that exceed or are in advance of amounts available in an appropriation or fund, or that exceed or are in advance of the amounts apportioned or permitted by agency regulations. 31 U.S.C. §§ 1341(a), 1517(a). Whenever a violation of the Antideficiency Act occurs, the head of the agency or the Mayor of the District of Columbia is required to “report immediately to the President and Congress all relevant facts and a statement of actions taken.” 31 U.S.C. §§ 1351, 1517(b). In the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2005, Congress amended the Antideficiency Act to add that the heads of executive agencies and the Mayor of the District of Columbia shall also transmit “[a] copy of each report . . . to the Comptroller General on the same date the report is transmitted to the President and Congress.” 31 U.S.C.
§§ 1351, 1517(b), as amended by Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2005, Pub. L.
The Senate Appropriations Committee Report explains that the purpose of this provision is to authorize:

“the Comptroller General to establish a central repository of Antideficiency Act reports. The Comptroller General will track all Antideficiency Act reports, including responses to Comptroller General legal decisions and opinions and findings in audit reports and financial statement reviews.”

Accordingly, as of December 8, 2004, whenever the head of an agency or the Mayor of the District of Columbia reports an Antideficiency Act violation to the President and presiding officers of each house of Congress, the agency and the District of Columbia, on the same date, must transmit a copy of the report to this Office. Agencies may electronically send PDF (portable document format) copies of these reports to AntideficiencyActReports@gao.gov. GAO will confirm receipt by e-mail.
Alternatively, agencies may send paper copies of these reports to GAO at the following address:

Comptroller General of the United States
U.S. Government Accountability Office
Antideficiency Act Reports
Room 7165
441 G Street, NW
Washington, DC 20548.

GAO has coordinated this new reporting requirement with the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). OMB will incorporate these new instructions in its upcoming revision of its Circular No. A-11, Preparation, Submission and Execution of the Budget, expected in July 2005.

If you have any questions about this circular, you may contact Ms. Janet Dolen (DolenJ@gao.gov). General inquiries may be directed to AntideficiencyActReports@gao.gov.
